Although host Chris Harrison dubbed it "the most controversial finale in "Bachelor" history," in a not-so-surprising move Ben Flajnik proposed to the show's "villain," Courtney Robertson of Scottsdale, in Monday's show.

The 28-year-old model giggled and cried as Flajnik told her that she is his "forever" in Zermatt, Switzerland.

The real dish, however, came on "The Bachelor: After the Final Rose" show, where Flajnik talked about life after the November proposal. They broke off the engagement. "I just cracked," he said. The break lasted a "few weeks."

Harrison asked about photos of Flajnik with another woman. "On my father's grave, I haven't kissed another woman," Flajnik said. It's "tabloid fodder."

So, are they a couple? Yes, said Flajnik, slipping the ring back on her finger.

Elsewhere, a split

"Twilight" actor Peter Facinelli, 38, and "Beverly Hills 90210" alum Jennie Garth, 39, are splitting after 11 years.

The two have three daughters: Luca, 14, Lola, 9, and Fiona, 5.

She's not saying it's inaccurate ...

Kim Kardashian has come up with an answer to Jon Hamm's Elle U.K. magazine remarks.

The "Mad Men" star was talking about how the success of reality-TV stars "doesn't make any sense" to him. "Whether it's Paris Hilton or Kim Kardashian or whoever, stupidity is certainly celebrated. ... Being a (expletive) idiot is a valuable commodity in this culture because you're rewarded significantly."

Kardashian responded on Twitter:

"We're all working hard and we all have to respect one another. Calling someone who runs their own businesses, is a part of a successful TV show, produces, writes, designs, and creates, 'stupid,' is in my opinion careless."
